DIDN'T LOOK AS IF HE'D LIE.

And Yet He Told a Tale of a Tin Pall That Was Remarkable Indeed. He was sitting on the lower forward deck of one of the Statendshandsrapid transit ferryboats. He wasyan old man, with a serious expression in this gray eyes, and his mouth above his snowy beard was thin and tightly closed. He did not look at all like a man who would jibke upon any subject.
He did not look like a man who would lie unless there was money to be made by so doing. Yet the following is a truthful account of what he said to an acquaintance who came and sat, near him. There were several horses on the boat, and a few words concerning oue of them gave the old man a chance to unburden his mind. This is how be did it:

'Yes, sir; talkin', of horses reminds me of suthin' that happened to me t'other day when I was out ridin' with my little boy. We was in my buggy an', I was drivin' that old mare o' gime You know that old mare, I've hed her now goin' on six year. Never was a kinder animal in harness than that mare. She ain't got no bad tricks an' she never hed. My old weman' has driv her ever sence I got her, an'she never hed no trouble o' no kind with her Well, sir, I was drivin' her as Lway a-sayin', with my little boy last Thursday afternoon. Remember what a showery day it was last Thursday? Well, one o' them showers come up when I was a-drivin', an' I put the mare into sixtot to git to shelter so's the boy wouldn't get wet 'Make her go faster, pop, says my little boy an' I hit her a lick with the whip to sort e' hurry her up. First thing you know she was goin' at a two-forty gait an' I leant back an' put the whip away. Jest then we ran over a tin bucket that was allyin' in the road an' somehow or other the handle of the bucket got caught 'round'one of the spokes of the buggy wheel an' went a-circlin' round with "It made the durndest clatter I ever did hear, an' it liked to have scart the wits clean out o'that there mare of She jest inid back her ears, kin to snorted like, an' humped herself for fall she knowed how. Go? I never seed the like in my life. She jest whizzed along, an' every time that old tin bucket pounded the ground she hump-ed herself floughaster. You bet my little boy didn't tell me to drive no faster then. He was as scart as the mare. I took him between my knees an belt ento him tight.

Well, sir, I don't know what wouldn't a happened a tit bedn't been that the tin pail fetched hose from the wheel, an' went a whizzin' by my head toward the mare, an'
I'll be gosh during ifert didnet hit her in the flank and ketch onto ther tail an' stick there. That swhat it did. Then she did go. D'yever 'se and race horses a comin' down the homostream in a close heat? Well, they wasn't a chromstance to the way that more o' mine rundast Thursday.

She got right down close to the ground an' skimmed dong the street like a light-nin' express on a down grade with all the brakes wide open.
"The tin bucket kept swingin' from side to side an' littin' her on first one flank an' then the other, an' at every lick she went faster. I do reckon she was a-goin' most a mile a minute, when stellast the bucket broke loose from her tail. Then I got a fresh hold on the lines an' sorter slackened her up, an' fore long she was a-trotting just as nice an' easy as you please. It was the queerest thing that ever happened to me in all the years I've been a-drivin', and I don't want nothin' like it to happen again. The next time I see a tin pail a-lyin' in the road you kin bet I'll give it all the room it wants. Hellot here we are in the slip. I didn't think we was much past Gov'ner's Island. I reckon we'd better be movin' to git off the boat." And the old man shut his lips close to gether again and was lost in the crowd which was hastening to get uptown from the Battery. The man to whom he had been talking was standing stock still gaz-ing after him and shaking his head slowly from side to side.—New York Sun.
